The practice of family medicine encompasses obstetrics for many practitioners – particularly those in small towns and communities. The Journal of Family Medicine Obstetrics invites scholarly articles, case studies and thoughtful comment pieces on topics pertinent to the practice of family medicine obstetrics. Topics might include:

- Practice management
- Clinical experiences such as delivering babies
- Academic preparation including doing a fellowship

Papers will be reviewed in accordance with JFMO guidelines; for further details, including manuscript guidelines and submission instructions, visit www.jfmo.cchs.ua.edu. Papers should be no longer than 20 double-spaced pages, including references, tables, and figures (12-point font). Essays should be a maximum of 10 pages. For further information, contact the Editor, Dan Avery at davery@cchs.ua.edu. The manuscript submission deadline is August 1, 2013.

Journal of Family Medicine Obstetrics is the official online journal for family physicians who practice or teach family medicine obstetrics in North America. It has a special emphasis on family medicine obstetrics fellows and family medicine residents interested in practicing obstetrics.

The Journal’s peer reviewed articles seek to keep family physicians abreast of the latest topics in family medicine obstetrics. Manuscripts focus on original research, evidenced-based medicine, continuing education, new developments, case reports, board certification and the practical aspects of clinical family medicine obstetrics.

The Journal is published semiannually by the Department of Obstetrics & Gynecology and the Family Medicine Obstetrics Fellowship Program within the College of Community Health Sciences at The University of Alabama.
